WORK

No man has been known to die from over-work, but more people have passed into the Great Beyond through lack of work than can be enumerated.

Work--manual labor, executive, or what-have-you-?--is a most important part of life's cycle; for, through work we find happiness, and without happiness, we perish. Hospital cots and straight-jackets are kept in use today for unfortunates who, not through their own stupidity, but by over-anxious "others," have been driven to mental debility. It is not work, remember, which degenerates them, but trying to work, and not being allowed that privilege.

"Happy, indeed, is the man who has found his work," one of our recent-day philosophers stated. He hit, so to speak, the proverbial nail on the head. If the great masses of people, who, each day roam the streets of our large cities, had found their respective callings, would not the world be the better for it?

Perhaps this unemployment is due to lack of Education, perhaps not, but today Education is each man's birthright, and ne must but curse himself, in later life, if he does not grasp it now. We students have, before us, Opportunity. It would be entropout we have a more and a mo

well to remember what the man who struggles will, at some time, acheive, and that the sloucher, he, through bluffs and excuses, may "slide by," will continue on his "sliding" course throughout life.

TO THE FRESHMAN

Each year, a new class enters our high school, and each year, we accept this class as a part of the school, without which we would be incomplete. The class begins to feel as one with us, and to realize the responsibilities, opportunities, and joys that are within its grasp.

Among the most important of a student's responsibilities are his studies. If he is successful in his classes and is a good student, then he can go on to his activities, but not before that. The real reason for his coming to high school is to learn, and how can he gain any knowledge when he considers everything else of more importance than his books?

Citizenship is the second big responsibility. To be a good citizen, one must have patriotism, or "school spirit." He must be willing to support his school through "thick and thin," and to work with enthusiasm on any project that is for the good of the school. He must abide by the rules and regulations of the school, and cooperate with his fellow--students in every possible way.

Transferring from responsibilities to opportunities, we find that class and club work athletics, holding Student Body offices, and putting out a school paper offer sphendid opportunities to the student. He is trained by these activities to be come an alert, energetic member of an organization, which will help him in later life to be a citizen of the state and nation.

Then, there are many joys to be obtained in the four years that we spend here in high school. We have our parties, eats, and dances, our picnics and our rallies. The friendships between schoolmates can never be replaced and the contact with our teachers in invalable. We may forget Ceasar and Alexander, but never a friend.

So, Freshman, remember that all these things are offered to you by your school, and try to appreciate them as well as to take advantage of them. We wish to welcome you to Liberty Union High, with hopes that you will earnestly endeavor to keep it what it has always been--a fine, progressive school.

There are many methods by which people judge institution of learning. By being so judged, a school may be ridiculed, or may be admired, according to the way in which it respects or ignores authority, as well as the effort put into the attain ment of knowledge.

any group of people, whether it is a great nation or a class in kindergarten. To produce good, law-abiding citizens, authority must be strictly enforced. This is a particularly prominent factor in the lives of the younger generation of today, because if they are allowed to mature without having been raised with stern ascendency, aggression will be the most natural path of life.

School spirit is also an important agent to those attend-

If they could only realize the pleasure derived from this feeling of companionship, school spirit would play an even greater part in the careers of high school students.

So, we of Liberty Union High School, attempt to place before you a mental picture of our every-day life at school. We have prepared shortstories and poets for your pleasure, typical of our various nature. Our comedies, satyrs, laughs are all to be enjoyed by parents and friends; for, surely, anyone who reads our Broadcaster, is a friend of Liberty High School.

We do not feel it a burdensome duty to continue the school paper -- in which our forerummers took so much pride -- but a pleasureable duty of our own.

It is our sincere wish that you will genuinely pleased with the product of our earnest efforts, the Broadcaster.

THE RYNAISSANCE OF A MAN OF NO INTEGRITY

The cool shadiness was the most pleasing appurtanence in the life of this indolent man. It was his principal pastime to recline his raspedly clothed body against a giant tree, standing sentinel like beside the trickling, sparkling, clear brook, whose miles of pebble-studded bed meandared down from the higher mountains. The stream bubbled along in its leisure-ly course over the gentle slopes. Occasionally it hesitated, then plunged headlong over a noisy, chattering cataract and smoothing out into a gentle murmur as it resumed its tortuous passage, winding through its banks of deep, cool, green forest.

This was just home to the nondescript man. His environment furnished him with sustenance from day to day, but the enhancing beauty of his sylvan surroundings was completely unregistered on the mind of this nondescript, human leach.

The Renaissance of the sixteenth century constituted many years, but that of this mortal of no account came more suddenly

One day as he was lying by the stream, he saw a sable and white collie dog trotting toward him. This was a handsome dog of good blood that came from the forest deaths, and seemed quite prepared to make a friend of the ragged man.

When a few feat from him, the dog suddenly ceased his approach and crouched to the ground, growling savagely.

Straight toward the man he rushed. No! a little to the side and narrowly missing the rock hurled his head, bounded past the man and into the bushes. Not a half dozen paces is back of the man, a mountaini puma gave vent to his battle cry. He had stolen up with the murderous intent of attacking the man, but the dog had apprehended him.

When the man perceived the cause of the terrible commotion he drew his knife and joined the battle. He was horribly slashed by the claws of the cat, but his aim was good and he succeeded in driving the knife into the heart of the beast.

The fight was over. The dog was badly maimed and nearly dead, but the man worked over him as he had never worked before and saved, what life remained in the poor, broken body.

When the crisis in the dog's illness was passed, the man stood in the moonlight and fought—and fought—a battle with his own thoughts.

when a magnificent dog would sacrifice his own life that a dirty, ragged missfit might live-well, there was courage-true blue stuff. Slowly he bared his chest and placed the point of his dagger between his third and fourth ribs. He steeled himself for the plumge, but: No! There was yet a spark of humanity in him. He would go out into the world and do something to aid mankind. Here his life was half gone and never in his life had he ever done a single thing to help any body in any way. It had been easier to simply exist.

When the dog was again able to travel, they set out for civilization. The man had no place to go, but followed the dog by instinct. Down, down, through valleys, over mountains, through towns, and cities, they went, until they came to a city

In reaching the front entrance to the beautiful mansion, the dog barked twice and immediately the door was opened by a pleasant appearing man of early middle age into whose arms the dog gleefuly bounded.

He gladly heard the story of the mountain man and was so pleased with the return of his champion collie, and the new man coming with the ragged clothes, that he gave him a permanent position in his huge factory.

It is almost needless to state that he prospered in his new surroundings with the help of the kind man with the head for business and that worthy's daughter with a head for romance.

AND WE CALL IT JUSTICE

The sun was shining brightly, and the birds were singing songs of freedom, but, behind the prison bars of San Quentin, a young man was in deep sorrow. The sun was behind the clouds for this man, and the songs of the birds were his death knell. He was sentenced to die at sunset for the murder of his dearest friend. He had plead "not guilty" at two trials, and yet the jury had sentenced him to die.

The young man's name was Frank, but he said, he would not hear his name again. Frank was from a country home and had never known the evils of the world. He was a tall, stalwart lad of about twenty-three.

On the eve of the murder of his friend, Frank had been with him, but had left him at the club-house where a dance was being given. From the club-house Frank had gone directly home.

About five o'clock the next morning Frank's friend was found murdered and robbed. Of course Frank was suspected, and had been unjustly convicted.

As the hour set for Frank's execution drew near, he had a determined look in his eyes. He would go through to the end, like the man that he was.

Then the fatal hour arrived. He had only three minutes yet to live. Slowly the clock ticked off and still he continued to breath. Two--just due one tick and Frank would be merely a name which become would remember. Three seemed to come after and electricity, and then--A cry! A cry of "Stop! He is not guilty." Everyone turned to see what this excited voice had to tell.

A small, insignificant messenger raced breathlessly, into the room, and he was clutching a pardon for Frank in his hand.

All turned to Frank--but to late. His head drooped. He had died fully a minute before the messenger arrived.

JUST AN ORDINARY TRAGEDY

It was a dark and starless night. The wind howled and shrieked through the treetops, and the rain was bounding down.

The murderer crept down a dark lane with his plot planned, and murder in his eyes.

The victim, alone, scared and cold, sat shivering at the foot of an old blasted tree, undecided whether to run or to remain.

The wind increased in volume, and the rain came down in torrents. The murderer drew nearer. A flash of lightning, which lit up the dark wood revealed the victim to the murderer.

He advanced to within one leap of his victim, who was now throughly paralized from fear.

A flash of lightning, a leap, and another little rabbit lay dying in the grasp of a great cat.

A reception was given in honor of the faculty on the evening of September 7. Instead of the usual evening of entertainment followed by refreshments, we had a social evening such as might have been held in one of our homes. Our parents met and visited with our teachers and at intervals during the evening, entertainment was given by the following students: Vocal Solo by Gladys Sullivan, cool palitied by Grace Lewis; Landolin Solo by Anna French, accompanied by Cynthia Burroughs; Spanish Song and Dance by the Spanish Club, accompanied on the plane by Glad Sullivan, on the mandolin by Anna French, on the banjo by Elmer Gauger; Piano Solo by Cynthia Burroughs; and a Vocal Duet by Sadie Cooper and Thelma Richardson, accompanied by Margaret Hevey.

The plan of this evening was a new one but proved to be a very successful way of acquainting our parents and teachers with each other.

The Rustlers of Brentwood gave a Balloon Dance on the night of September 10. The balloons which were given to each individual, caused the merrymakers to have a very enjoyable time amidst the large floating bubbles. Music was furnished by the Pittsburg

The Freshmen Reception on Friday night, September 22, proved very amusing to those present. The Freshmen staged a play which showed their ability under the coaching of their class teacher, Miss Manley. The characters were: Ruth Edgell, Virginia Carpenter, Ceibe Parker, Della Crocco, Ervin Wells and Elmer Armstrong

The Frosh were then called upon to do impromtu stunts. These amused the audience very much but it was understood that the Freshmen did not enjoy them.

Refreshments (which consisted of salad, coffee, and cake) were served in the commercial room and then dancing was enjoyed by all those present until twelve o'clock.

Music was furnished by the Diablo Valley Syncopators.

A reception was given in honor of the beginning typing students by the advanced students on the evening of September 27. A very unusual initiation took place in which some of the alumni assisted. STUDENT BODY NOTES

When Rendall Burroughs called a special meeting on August twenty-fifth, we turned out en masse to find out what it was all about. We soon discovered that it was called to consider a teacher's reception. A motion was made and carried that we have one end that was the end of the meeting.

Of course, we were all prepared for the regular meeting on September first. First of all dates for three affairs were set. They were:

Teachers : Reception -- Sept. "Freshie" Reception -- Sept. 16 Sophomore Hop----0ct. 22

Miss Burroughs offered her resignation as vice presddent and it was accepted. Mr. Crandall was the only candidate for the office and we welcome him to his new business with three loud cheers.

It was at this meeting that we had a discussion, on a very important subject, -- "The Broadcaster. After lengthy arguments, we decided upon a quarterly paper, in place of a monthly. That discussion ended our meeting.

Treat work

The J. H. T. organization is a very large one this year, and we have many enthusiastic and prosperous members. Consequently, we are confident that we will work hard; that we are going to bring home some of the cups this term and that we will give Liberty the highest of honors.

Therefore, beware of the K. K. K. members of 1927-28.

SPORTS

Well, how many pennants are we going to win this year? Someone said we should win four football, basketball, track and baseball, but we won't be hoggish and try to take them all. We think two championships are enough for one school each year, so we are going to compete only in track and baseball. I think you all know why we are not playing basketball and football.

At the first Athletic meeting of the year, which was held at Crockett, the other schools announced that they would refuse to play basket ball with our school on our dirt courts, and, due to this, Liberty will not have a basketball team this year or, in the years to come, until we have a gym. Nevertheless, we have not ty-Antioch game of Wednesday, given up hopes of having a gym and, so to keep basketball alive in the school, Coach Spindt intends to form an interclass basketball league, the winner will receive the Interclass Pennant which is now held by the Senior Class.

TRACK

The reason I think we will again cop the track championship is because Coach Spindt says so. It was Mr. Spindt who predicted that we would win last year, and we did. It is not going to be an easy job by any means, because Liberty lost they had the previous year.

three good men by graduation. These men were good for about 25 or 30 points and good track men are not easy things to With some very good find. prospects, we figure on putting a good team in the running this year.

SOCCER

Liberty started off the season with a victory over Dan+ ville last Friday afternoon. It was a hard played contest from start to finish. The final score was 2-1.

There is no soccer league; these games are played merely for the sport and to take the place of football for those schools which do not have foot ball.

The results of the Liber-12, were 2-1 in our favor.

BASEBALL

Jimmy Hannum, our star pitcher and baseball critic, gives his point of view on the outlook of our baseball team.

Liberty's chance for the baseball championship is going to be much greater than last year, due to the fact that we have practically the same team. The players of last year will have much more experience than

All the other teams in the league have lost players by graduation. We have a few new prospects in the Freshman Class Halstead-second base

The 1928 captain and manager have not been elected, but we hope that they will do as well as last year's captain and manager.

We had a good team last year as far as fielding went, but none of them could hit a balloon.
